The Star-Spangled Banner

The national anthem of the United States of America is a song called The Star-Spangled Banner. The words of the song, known as lyrics, come from a poem written by lawyer and author Francis Scott Key. Francis was born in 1779 and witnessed the Battle of Baltimore in 1814. During this battle, Francis saw the British army try to conquer Fort McHenry by the coast in Locust Point. The fort was not conquered and, as the sun rose, Francis could see a large flag still flying above the fort. He wrote a poem about what he saw called Defence of Fort M'Henry and the words of this poem became the USA's national anthem.

The lyrics have been set to a popular British tune called The Anacreontic Song. The music was written by John Stafford Smith who was born in 1750. He was a composer and he played the organ for churches.

The lyrics to The Star-Spangled Banner are:

Oh, say! Can you see, by the dawn's early light,
what so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming;
whose broad stripes and bright stars, through the perilous fight,
over the ramparts we watched were so gallantly streaming?
And the rocket's red glare, the bombs bursting in air, gave proof through the night that our flag was still there.
Oh, say! Does that star-spangled banner yet wave over the land of the free and the home of the brave?

Tomorrow is a big day for Americans; it is independence day! This day is a national holiday for the USA as they celebrate.

1. Who wrote the music that the lyrics were set to?
2. ...and witnessed the Battle of Baltimore in 1814. What do you think this phrase means?
3. At what time of day did Francis see the flag? Explain how you know.

4. Fill in the missing words from the poem:

5. Find and copy one word that the poet uses to show that the fight was dangerous.

6. ... what so proudly we hailed...

L.O: To design a parade float for independence day.

Every year, Newport hosts the carnival and there is a theme. NJS work hard to make that theme come to life and many of you will have possibly sat on the float.

Tomorrow is a big day for Americans; it is independence day! This day is a national holiday for the USA as they celebrate.

Use the pictures on here to design your own float for the 4th of July parade.

Tip: Read the information on the next slide before starting your design!

The Origin of Independence Day

The United States began as the Thirteen Colonies. People from Great Britain braved high seas aboard wooden ships to make a new life in North America. They were looking for religious freedom, land, and career opportunities.

The relationship between the Thirteen Colonies and Great Britain began as a friendly one. As time passed through, the people of the Colonies wanted to separate from Britain. The fight turned physical in 1775 when the Revolutionary War began. The people of the Thirteen Colonies were determined to break free from British rule.

In June of 1776, Richard Henry Lee of Virginia proposed complete separation from the British. The Committee of Five, which included Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Robert Livingston, and Roger Sherman, created a document stating their desire to separate. Thomas Jefferson wrote the first draft of the Declaration and the document was approved by Congress on July 4th, 1776.

Historians aren't certain whether the Declaration of Independence was actually signed on July 4th or later in 1776. Whichever day it was signed, July 4th is still an important day in the United States history. The 'Fourth of July' is a federal holiday that is celebrated all over the country with parades, fireworks, and picnics.
