Objective: To write the introduction to my instructions.

Success Criteria

1. I can give my instructions an appropriate title.
2. I can write a clear introduction giving details of the product.
3. I can include varied sentence structures in my introduction.

Starter: grammar

Circle the subordinating conjunction in each sentence.

- 1) John went home because it was raining.
- 2) Since he sold his car, Dave has had to get the bus.
- 3) If you finish your homework, you can have some ice cream.
- 4) Mary went to the shops as she needed milk.
- 5) The children went out to play even though it was raining.
- 6) After the film had finished, Joe and his friends went to Nandos.

Introduction to your instructions

- Your introduction is very important because it tells the reader what they will be doing.
- It has to be engaging because otherwise, they won't read the rest of it!
- It needs to tell the reader:
 - WHAT they are going to make or learn
 - WHY they should make or learn it
 - Some INFORMATION about the thing they are making
 - A QUESTION for the reader
- Look at the example introductions on the next slides

Your task

Write the title and introduction to your instructions.

Go back to your notes from last week to remind yourself what you are going to write about.

1* support: Write 3 sentences in your introduction. Use a computer and practise your typing skills if this helps.

3* challenge: Include a relative clause, a fronted adverbial, a rhetorical question, an ellipsis and some bold/italic/CAPITALS.
